

The Renunciate And Tapaswi Children Are Always Close And Those Who Pass.

Today, Baba is celebrating a meeting of the eyes with the children who are merged in His eyes. BapDada and the Brahmins are merged in the vision of such children, for this is their entire world. Whilst seeing, they do not see anything else because they constantly remain merged in the Father's love. They are constantly merged in the ocean of the Father's virtues, that is, in the Ocean of Knowledge, Happiness and Bliss. BapDada is happy to see such children. No matter how far away they may be physically, such children have a place constantly fixed close to the Father. Do you know what that place is?

Anyone who is loved is placed very close and that place is the eyes or the heart. Are those merged in the heart more elevated or those who are merged in the eyes more elevated? Which of the two is number one? Is the significance and importance of both the same? That is, those of you who think that if you are merged in the heart, you are also merged in the eyes, raise your hand! Those of you who think that the importance of each is different, that is, those who are merged in the heart are separate from those who are merged in the eyes, raise your hand! Whilst being the same, the importance of each is different; therefore, both answers are right. How can BapDada fail all these renunciate and tapaswi children who have renounced all their innumerable religions as well as the systems of their bodily religions and have become engaged in the tapasya of remembering BapDada? Therefore, you have all passed.

Foreigners always study in short (briefly) because they remain busy. BapDada has reminded you of just one word: what is that one word? The one word is "pass"; you have to pass and remain close (paas in Hindi), and whatever has already happened, that is the past. The one word has three meanings. This will become a shortcut for you and you will pass with honour. However, in order to stabilise yourself in these meanings of this word, you constantly need to have the power to accommodate and the power to make others the same as the Father. In order to become the same as the Father, when you go onto the field of service, all types of situations come in front of you. With the power of accommodation, you can accommodate those situations and become a master ocean and can also make others equal to the Father. To accommodate means that there shouldn't be the slightest trace of any gross feelings of any situation still remaining even in your thoughts. Words that have caused a loss should be transformed into benevolent feelings in such a way that words causing a loss are not even spoken. Such a stage is called the stage of a world benefactor. Whilst seeing anyone's defect, within one second, transform that defect into a virtue. Transform the loss into benefit. Transform defamation into praise. Only someone who constantly has such a vision and attitude is called a world benefactor. Not just a world benefactor, but such a soul also becomes a self benefactor. Such a stage is said to be like that of the Father's.

Achcha, whether you are foreigners or those stabilised in the awareness of your original home, BapDada always sees everyone as those who belong to the home, not as foreigners. To meet BapDada is the practical fruit of the memorial of love of the children of this home. The heart-to-heart conversation at amrit vela of the foreigners, as well as those who belong here, is very entertaining. At that time, they especially have two forms: One are those who meet and converse with Baba as though they have a right. The other are those who meet and converse with Baba with complaints as souls who are desperate for something. BapDada has great pleasure on hearing this. However, BapDada saw one speciality in the majority of souls, and that is that the foreigners and those who belong to the home are not souls who become content with just a little. The majority claim a special right. They do not even want to become Rama or Sita; they wish to become Lakshmi or Narayan.

Because you have an elevated aim, BapDada congratulates you. You must constantly remain stable in this aim and maintain the qualifications for this aim. You are in front of BapDada; you are not far away. Those who are seated on the heart throne are always close. Today, all the children, who are engaged in thinking, have just the one thought of celebrating a meeting. Even whilst sleeping, you should be in remembrance. Seeing all the foreign children in front of Him, BapDada is giving special remembrances. Achcha.

To those who keep an elevated aim; to those who make a promise to the Father; to those who constantly remain absorbed in the Father and in service, to the loving and cooperative souls who come last and go fast; to those who bring the Father into the corporeal form also; to the sparkling stars of the previous kalpa, BapDada's love, remembrance and namaste.
