Seeing the Diamond

Dadi has always had the ability to see right through me. Right through to the to the heart of me. She first saw me via a photograph of me that my mother showed to her. Dadi studied the photo and said 'bring her to Madhuban'. Every time my mother would meet Dadi or every time she went to Madhuban my mother would show her my picture and tell her about me. Later when Dadi visited our centre it was the time we met face to face. She looked at me the way a gemologist looks at a unique, uncut, unpolished diamond. Her deep loving gaze pierced right through my flaws and gave me the courage to believe in myself.

If it were not for Dadi's flawless gaze, I don't believe I'd be here living a purpose-filled diamond like life; a life of love for God; a life of kindness.

Dadi on this 100th year of this incredible lifetime of many lives, I simply say, "Thank You for the flawless vision."

Words of Wisdom:

To become a flawless diamond one has to leave the habit of looking at others. A diamond does not need to look at anyone else. We diamonds are individual, separate from others and so we have to look at ourselves. In the soul-conscious stage, create such a deep relationship with Baba, that you do not see anyone apart from Baba. One becomes a diamond through the power to discriminate. One who wants to become a diamond is attentive to remove all flaws – not a single flaw should remain. My thoughts should remain clean and peaceful. In Baba's remembrance, such a soul becomes the form of light and draws in might.

There are 365 days a year and every day I ask myself 'Why have I come to Baba? What is the purpose of my life?' My life is to take light from Baba and give light to others. Others should receive light through our service and our stage. Visualize how your life should be. Work on yourself in a deep subtle way.

The world is in distress. Time is calling out. We must now share with others whatever we have attained from the Father. Give others the experience of the original stage by giving them the experience of the rays of peace and love from the Father. Remain equal to the Father, so that nothing but the Father is visible.

Drishti Point:

As I live my daily purpose-filled life in the love of God, I let my vision fall on the flawless diamond within each one and with my ability to see right through to the core and essence of each one, I fill them with the belief that in their original state they too are flawless.

Karma Yoga Exercise:

As I move and carry on with my daily tasks I stay connected to the source of all powers and light. I am light, I am love, I am peace.
